ABOUT

Skeleton Drive is the indie music project of Dillon Rae Oliver, blending elements of folk music, emo, punk, and pop into a cathartic blend of so-called “folk-emo”. Hailing from Northeast Ohio, Dillon started Skeleton Drive in late 2018, writing and recording songs right out of their apartment in Kent, Ohio. After 3 EPs and several years of playing local music venues, coffee shops, bars, and art galleries, they amassed a tight local following in the greater Akron and Cleveland areas. By 2022 they had begun opening for larger touring acts passing through and, not long after, were going on tours throughout the Midwest and New England areas themselves.

In 2024, Skeleton Drive dropped their debut LP “Go home.”, which incorporated more instrumentation, giving the music a more rounded, full-band sound.

Now, after honing in their sound and releasing more and more increasingly well-written and recorded songs, Skeleton Drive continues to perform regularly and is currently mapping out their Summer 2026 tour, which will be their biggest endeavor yet.

TESTIMONIALS

- "Working with Dillon of Skeleton Drive on their various projects, whether it be a music video, album, or even an overdub or photoshoot, has always been an intuitive, enjoyable process. They always have a clear, approachable concept already draw-out of what they are artistically visioning. Dillon is one of the few musicians I've had the pleasure of working and collaborating with who has genuine ambition and work ethic to make their projects come to life. The "Drive" in Skeleton Drive should be emphasized as less of a destination or place and more of a mindset; Dillon has drive at their core.

Even better, they are not opposed to taking constructive criticism and expanding their ideas via collaboration and outside input. I have seen them grow as a musician, performer, and artistic entrepreneur since 2018, and I must say, their potential is endless. Their work ethic has allowed them to make a modest, passionate statement out of nothing besides their brooding, angsty, stage presence and a black acoustic guitar. Being able to give them more resources from using my studio has allowed them to become a powerhouse of creativity and I am elated to be able to be a part of their journey."
